ON THE FIELD OF WATERLOO

Memorial That Marks the Scene of One of the World's Greatest Battles.

Great among the landmarks of "the world stands the Lion of Waterloo on its mound 200 feet high, says the Strand. Ten miles from the city of Brussels it marks the plain where over 60,000 men were killed, wounded and missing. It is hardly necessary to say that it was fought on June 18, 1815, and that it culminated the campaign following Napoleon's escape from Elba and stopped his mighty effort to conquer all Europe.

The Duchess of Richmond gave a ball in Brussels on June 15; at midnight Wellington, having already heard that the outposts had been engaged, went to the ball. Here he found the Prince of Orange, the man who seemed fated to cause useless loss of life through his blunders. Even now he ought to have been at Blinche, where the duke promptly sent him, after inquiring for news.

Far from being surprised at the evening's attack, as some writers assert, the duke had dispatched his orders before he went to the ball, for at 2 a. m. strange sounds broke the night's silence, and great masses of troops were on the move, bugles were blowing everywhere and people opened their windows to see the various regiments tramp past. A Highland band were playing their bagpipes to the swing of the "Black Watch" as they went out to battle through the Namur gate. Curiously enough, many of the officers were still wearing their silk stockings and dancing pumps, for the heat was so intense that men went mad and died on the march; but for the rest, they pushed on and were soon under fire. The battle itself is eclipsed by the thought of the awful aftermath; the plain so filled with the dying and the dead that for three days parties brought in the wounded.

In the harry 300 bodies were flung down a well. For 30 years the corn crops were of a deeper color where they grew over the blood of the slain on the scene where the Lion of Waterloo now forms the greatest of the landmarks of the world.

RICHES IN HOUSE PLASTER

Remains of Abandoned Town in Montana Found to Yield Gold in Paying Quantities.

Shipping plaster from a house to a smelter for the gold, silver, and lead in it is a new departure in the way of making money, but that is what is being done by Frank Fish.

For about fifteen years Fish has been working the tailing at the old Gregory mine, near Wickes. The property is owned by the Helena and Livingston company. Recently a big chunk of plaster fell from the ceiling of one of the houses. Fish found it was very heavy, and he had it assayed. The returns were satisfactory, and then he obtained from the company a lease, with the right to smelt all of the plaster in all of the houses in the town. As the town has long since been abandoned and the houses were going to decay the leases did not disturb any one.

Fish has already shipped eight tons of the plaster to the East Helena smelter, and the returns are said to be satisfactory to him. The richness of the plaster is not surprising. When Gregory was on the map and a booming camp and houses were built the sand used was taken from the tailings. The methods of getting the values out of the ores were crude and the tailings were rich. This sand comprises the larger portion of the material in the plaster, and now it pays to smelt it.—Helena (Mont.) Dispatch to the New York Sun.

Fossils in Profusion.

Dr. Robert Broom of London, in a recent lecture, says the oldest known fossils are 18,000,000 years old. Wait, please—it isn't necessary to inquire too closely into the reasons on which Dr. Broom bases his belief in this matter, nor to kick up any dispute about the question. But it is safe to say that in every town and community, there are fossils far from 18,000,000 years old. They are persons who walk about and hold converse with their neighbors and are hopelessly out of touch with affairs. They are opposed to everything that savors of either newness or action. They have tired of activity. Yet they persist in hanging around on the outskirts of activity. What is to be done with them? Oh, the natural way is to get huffy and to call them fossils, boneheads and all that sort of thing. But there is another way to dispose of them. Let them have their say. Then exercise the function of forgetfulness and let the chariot roll on.—Detroit Free Press.

Dangerous Hiccoughs.

Two unusual cases of suffering through hiccoughs are reported. In one, a man had an attack of hiccoughs which lasted for nine days before he obtained relief. A little girl had a much worse attack, which lasted between three and four months, and was the result of a fright. Doctors had been unable to end the paroxysms, and many times it was thought the child would die. She had wasted away alarmingly, and hope for her recovery was abandoned. But a short time ago she had a violent attack of coughing. Her mother gave her cold tea and lemon. The coughing stopped. Everybody waited anxiously expecting the hiccoughing to return. But it did not.

DIVIDED INTO TWO CLASSES

Differing Processes of the Mind May Be Classified Either as the "Visual" or the "Auditive."

The great majority of people can be classified in one or other of two psychological types, corresponding to the great senses of sight and hearing.

These classes sometimes are called the "visuals" and the "auditives" respectively. The "visuals" or visualizers seem to conduct the majority of their mental processes by visual symbolism. They "think in pictures"; their mental method is graphic. The majority of women belong to this group, and, of course, the majority of painters, sculptors, architects, decorators, engineers and mechanically gifted people. Such people readily apprehend space relations, and can conceive new ones. If they possess this power in high degree they may paint fine pictures, build new types of architecture, conceive new machines.

The auditives, on the other hand, think more in sounds and words and not in pictures. They naturally include the musicians, the men of letters and the scientific and philosophic among men than among women. They notice things around them less, and are more commonly credited with being "absent-minded."

If great development of either is rare, vastly rarer is great development of both in one and the same individual. Such individuals stand out as the few supreme examples of what we call versatility, and of these the most notable representative in the history of the world is Leonardo da Vinci.

SOME REALLY GRAND OLD MEN

Historical Records of Longevity That by Rights Should Be Accompanied by an Affidavit.

The Mexican who has just died at the alleged age of 185 has been predeceased (according to American laws) during the past dozen years or so by a citizen of New Brunswick aged 132, and a comparative youngster of Valley Mills, Tex., whose age was only 115.

The man in the street will be pardoned for thinking that the 185 has been inadvertently transposed from a cricket report. Among ex-Biblical heroes probably Ald Parr and Henry Jenkins will stand as the best authenticated instances of superlongevity. The monument at Bolton, Yorkshire, records that Jenkins attained "the amazing age of 169."

"A man is 85," observed Mr. Dooley recently, "looks down on a man in 85, and receives his oallow ophysions with a supercilious smile," and for that reason probably (if not because he was a fisherman) Jenkins was able to give evidence on oath concerning matters 140 years or so previous. As a hale young centenarian he was in the habit of swimming the Swale "with ease," and as a boy he is said to have taken a horse-load of arrows to be forwarded north for the battle of Flodden.—London Mail.

Interesting Search.

William Dana Orcutt, whose new novel, "The Moth," has just been published by the Harpers, is noted for his extreme diligence in verifying all historical facts that appear in his novels. When writing one of his earlier novels, "The Spell," he made a special trip to Florence in order to verify certain allusions and locations. One of the first pilgrimages was to San Domenico to find the ancient inscription upon the wall, which Helen Armstrong points out to her husband in the first chapter. Says the author, "I had never been able to discover where I obtained this data, so was particularly anxious to verify it. One morning, accompanied by Mrs. Orcutt, I set out on what seemed a hopeless quest. We located the old Etruscan wall, with its curious marks, but no legends. Finally we came to some fading posters announcing an auction sale, and beneath these, when pulled aside, we found the Latin words, cut deep in the stone."

German's Slot Literature.

Penny in the slot literature is the latest thing in Germany. A firm of publishers at Leipzig has patented an automatic machine which gives a choice of a dozen small paper covered volumes which are displayed behind glass. On a strip of paper across each volume is printed a brief description of the book, and a coin in the slot does the rest. These automatic machines are to be placed in hotel lobbies, waiting rooms, theater foyers and other public places. The hope is expressed that as the books offered are carefully selected and by first-class authors the venture may have a beneficial educative effect upon the masses and thus counteract the influence of the cheap and trashy literature with which the country is flooded.—Exchange.

Fame.

Great minds had rather deserve contemporaneous applause, without obtaining it, than obtain without deserving it; if it follow them, it is well; but they will not deviate to follow it. With inferior minds the reverse is observable; so that they can command the flattery of knaves while living, they care not for the execrations of honest men when dead. Milton neither aspired to present fame, nor even expected it; but (to use his own words) his "high ambition was to leave something so written to after ages, that they should not willingly let it die." And Cato finely observed that he would much rather that posterity should inquire why no statues were erected to him, than why they were.

FORCED TO LIVE THINGS UP

Just an Example of What the Resourceful Hostess Will Do When a Party Drags.

Miss Charlotte Van Cortlandt Nicoll recently gave in the surf off Long Branch a bathing tea party, a mas servant wading out with a boat-shaped floating tea table perfectly appointed, wherefrom Miss Nicoll and her friends, in five feet of water, partook of buttered toast, caraway tea, muffins, scones and cakes.

Congratulated upon this novel party, Miss Nicoll, who is a sister of De Lancey Nicoll, smiled and said:

"I believe in the hostess who is resourceful—the hostess of Mrs. Blanc's type."

"Mrs. Blanc was giving a tea party on her yacht. The affair, for some reason, was dragging dreadfully. The guests talked of nothing but the weather, and even in this talk there would come long, deadly silences."

"Suddenly Mrs. Blanc, losing her balance, fell heavily against her brother-in-law, who sat beside the low rail, and with a moaning cry the dear old lady went headforemost overboard."

"Of course, she was rescued; but afterwards Mr. Blanc took Mrs. Blanc privately to task."

"How clumsy you were," he said, "to knock mother into the water like that. I'm afraid she won't care to visit us again in a hurry. You really should be more careful."

"Now, George," said Mrs. Blanc, "be reasonable. I had to do something. I simply had to. Didn't you see how our party was dragging?"—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

MAN OF SAVING DISPOSITION

Wives Will Know How to Sympathize With the Unfortunate Better Half of Mr. Graball.

Old Graball is mean—really mean. He once built a house, and nearly gave himself brain fever deciding which was better—a lot of windows—which were cheaper, but needed soap and water for cleaning—or more bricks for wall space.

One day he came home and found that his wife had saved money out of his housekeeping allowance, and was repairing the dining-room. And then he started to rave.

"I don't object to the money being spent, although new paper is just extravagance when the old one has only been on seven years," he gasped, red and hoarse with rage, "but I do object to the way you have put it on. Oh, how dare you paste it on!" he finished, with a wall.

"How else could I put it on?" asked Mrs. Graball, in surprise.

"How else?" he retorted when he could speak. "Why, tack it on, of course! You don't suppose we shall live in this house for ever, do you?"

Habits of the Democracy.

Arthur I. Vorys, a regular and optimistic Republican, was voicing his opinion that in the next election the Democrats would repeat their many former experiences and bury their hopes at the polls. It reminded him of the experience of the middle-aged woman who went into a shop, and, without hesitation, made straight for the grape counter. The girl who handled this funeral material was extremely affable.

"We have a large stock of grapes," she explained. "Let me show you some new French goods, very popular at this time for every kind of mourning, and designed to express every degree of grief. If you will tell me for whom you are in mourning, I can fix you out in exactly the right thing."

"Husband," replied the customer briefly.

"In that case," said the girl, graciously, "I can tell you just what—"

"Young lady," interrupted the older woman angrily. "You needn't bother yourself. This is the fourth husband I've buried, and I know all about it."—The Popular Magazine.

When the Small Boy Talks.

One day recently a coterie of young women in West Philadelphia completed plans for a moonlight excursion on the river, and when the evening of the trip arrived it was noticed that one of the most charming members of the party wore a shawl about her shoulders. One of her companions wondered at this and to her query as to whether the wearer was afraid of taking cold received a negative reply. Another suggested that possibly she had malaria. This was also emphatically denied. At this juncture the irrepressible small brother of the shawl wearing young woman volunteered to explain matters, and despite his sister's vehement command to keep silent, said: "The reason sis wears that shawl is so that when she is on the boat Bob can put his arm under it and hug her, and she thinks nobody can see through the game."

Incident of the War.

During General Blinney's raid through Florida, a bright little girl was found alone at one house, her parents having escaped. She did not know whether the troops were union or rebel. Two fine dogs made their appearance while a conversation was being held with the child, and she informed one of her questioners that their names were Gilmore and Beauregard. "Which is the best dog?" asked a bystander. "I don't know," said she; "they're both mighty smart dogs; but they'll either of 'em smart eggs if you don't watch 'em." The troops left without ascertaining whether the family of which the girl was so hopeful a savior was union or rebel.
